

An Environmentalist = Lying Piece of Shit

Written by Barthélemy Barbancourt
Thursday, 11 March 2010 13:24 -

Here's an easy way to cut through the clutter of news today, anyone that labels themselves an "Environmentalist" is most likely a lying Piece of Shit. From MMGW to renewable energy, environmentalist have to use lies and deception to get at our money. Here is an example of how federal employees helped environmentalists spread more lies.

The Energy Department worked closely with the wind industry lobby to discredit a Spanish report that criticized wind power as a job killer, internal DOE e-mails reveal.

*The e-mails obtained from a Freedom of Information Act request show how, starting last April, lobbyists at the American Wind Energy Association became alarmed that lawmakers were citing a study by Spain's King Juan Carlos University. The study found that Spain's massive investments in wind power cost 2.2 jobs for every "green" job created.

The study came out in early 2009 just as the wind lobby was building up its presence in Washington, hoping it could score big in an energy bill then being debated in Congress. Industry lobbyists feared the Spanish study would halt momentum for pro-wind legislation.

Check out the findings again. Wind power investments cost 2.2 jobs for every job created. California has also found that their green jobs program has cost the state jobs.

There are a ton of reasons why real unemployment is at 17% and the green movement is one of them. The millions transferred to Al Gore's bank account had to come from somewhere and each dollar wasted has a cost in the private sector. We could increase employment tomorrow if we threw every environmentalist out of Washington and St. Paul.