

Language has two meanings in America

Ever notice how the progressives, leftists, Democrats, whatever you want to call them, they're all the same, have their own language? Their language is based on a smattering of excuses, minimalizations and explanations.

Take lie for example... as in purposely telling a falsehood. In their language its not a lie at all (unless its somebody they disagree with), it's "misspeaking" or "misspoke." What is it with the left and their dumbass made up words? A lie is a lie, it isn't "misspeaking." Can we stop with the BS already?

Health Reform? No way. It's socialized medicine. Economic Recovery Act? HA! It's just social spending, period. Immigration Reform? No, that's amnesty. Green Jobs, Green Economy, etc... Nope! It's welfare. By that I mean it's all government subsidies or mandates with regards to the "green" stuff. Climate Bill? Oh please! It's a massive energy tax.

Racist is any right of center person that is white. Tea Bagger, Astroturf and the like is anyone concerned with the constitution. A "Right" is an entitlement, and an Entitlement is a "Right." Partisan is any opposition to their authority. Bipartisan is only when the Right caves to the Left. Obstructionist is anyone from the Right that is successful in stalling or killing Leftist legislation, when the Left does it to the Right, it's called Heroic, Principled, and similar descriptives. If anyone has any more, feel free to post them in the comments. This is what I came up with spur of the moment.
