

Do You Agree On Anything?

Written by Harlan
Friday, 07 May 2010 16:01 -

I'd like to think that most folks live in an interactive world where one must step out of the house every morning and make nice with the world and function without throwing a snarky pissy fit whenever one encounters a viewpoint that runs counter to one's. The electronic realm is a color negative of this real world interaction. That said, even with those with whom you may disagree, where do you find common ground?