

New Laptop time again

Written by Barthélemy Barbancourt

Friday, 05 March 2010 09:08 - Last Updated Thursday, 04 March 2010 21:19

My trusty Gateway with a Centrino 2.0 GHz Duo Core with 4GB of RAM running Vista just can keep up anymore. I tried to upgrade to Windows 7 but the upgrade didn't work and I have too much stuff on the laptop to keep risking it.

I looked at the i5 machines at Best Buy that are around $900. Best Buy has a Blue Label program that seems to be what I need.

Then there is a Sony laptop with an i7 chip set. It's the second fastest laptop in the store (After a Mac of course) and I'm thinking maybe I should go for it and get the fastest machine possible and hope to get 2 years out of it. The new 64-bit machines can handle 8 GB of RAM and have Windows 7 which should help speed things up.

Anyway, you guys are all geeks, so what do you think? I'll probably buy one next week.